PASSAGGIO 1 DI 9

Remove the protective sheet from your 12 by 12 inch acetate sheet by gently peeling it away from one corner.

PASSAGGIO 2 DI 9

Take two sheets of acetate and place one in your guillotine. Trim a thin slither off the top edge and a similar slither off one side to create a slightly smaller piece for your box lid.

PASSAGGIO 3 DI 9

Decide on your desired box depth (approximately 1.5 inches is average). Use a score tool to score lines at this measurement on all four sides of both acetate sheets.

4

PASSAGGIO 4 DI 9

Score additional lines at 1 cm intervals on all four sides of the acetate sheet. These scored lines will create the flaps that hold the box together.

PASSAGGIO 5 DI 9

At each corner, cut a diagonal line from the top corner down towards the base, then cut across to create a tapered corner flap. This creates a chamfered edge that will fold neatly when assembling the box.

PASSAGGIO 6 DI 9

Apply double-sided tape to the flaps of the acetate sheet. Fold the acetate up along the score lines, tucking the flaps inside to form the box base.

PASSAGGIO 7 DI 9

Repeat the taping and folding process with your second acetate sheet to create the box lid. Ensure all four sides are securely taped and the corners are neatly folded.

8

PASSAGGIO 8 DI 9

Test that the lid fits over the base by gently pressing it down. The slightly smaller dimensions should allow it to sit snugly on top of the base.

PASSAGGIO 9 DI 9

Decorate the top of your finished acetate box by adhering decorative paper panels featuring flowers and butterflies, or sentiment labels, to the exterior using double-sided tape.

CONSIGLI DALLA PUNTATA

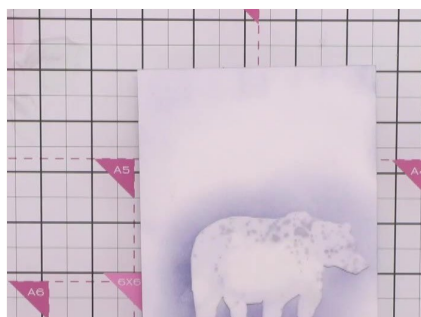

- Construction weight acetate scores beautifully without creating the spidery web flare that occurs with thinner acetates.
- Don't take slivers off all four sides of the lid piece—only trim the top and one side to ensure proper fit.
- If you prefer a smaller box, cut 8 by 8 acetate sheets and score at 1 inch instead of 1.5 inches for a 7 by 7 finished box.
